NEW SUPPORTIVE HOUSING COMMUNITY OPENS IN WEST COLUMBUS

COLUMBUS (March 25, 2013)--Community Housing Network is proud to announce the opening of its newest permanent supportive housing project, Inglewood Court Apartments—a self-contained complex comprised of 60 apartments. Located on the west side of Columbus at 3720 Sullivant Avenue in a relaxing, wooded setting, Inglewood Court Apartments offers tenants privacy, but is still in close proximity to public transportation, shopping, places of worship and employment opportunities.

“The Inglewood development furthers CHN’s mission to provide affordable housing and supportive services for individuals plagued by histories of homelessness, mental illness and substance abuse,” said CHN CEO and Executive Director Susan Weaver. “We are grateful for the warm reception we received by the Greater Hilltop community, and look forward to the successful integration of our residents in the community.” CHN signed a Good Neighbor Agreement with the Greater Hilltop Area Commission, the Hilltop Senior Village and Water of Life Church, which defines the community standards and expectations for operations and communication.

CHN partners with Mary Haven, a provider of integrated behavioral healthcare services since 1953, to provide a full range of tenant support services including mental health and recovery services to residents. In addition to medical services, tenants have access to employment services through CHN partner the Center of Vocational Alternatives. Inglewood Court’s community spaces have been designed to facilitate social engagement, which promotes tenants’ reintegration and socialization. The community features an array of amenities including, but not limited to, an exercise room, computer learning center and picnic area.

“We would like to thank the City of Columbus, Community Shelter Board, Franklin County, Ohio Finance Housing Agency and the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development for their funding and support of the Inglewood Court project,” Weaver said.

CHN began construction of the Inglewood Court Apartments in March 2012, and completed construction in March 2013.
